Stroke Corner Research Review Video: Development & Results of an Implementation Plan for HIGT

Dr. Moore and team won the Stroke SIG Best Platform award at CSM 2022

The image shows a video player interface. On the left, a slide titled "Methods: Implementation Frameworks" is visible, featuring a box for the "Consolidated Framework for Implementation Research" by Damschroder et al, 2009; Powell et al, 2015. On the right, a slide titled "The Knowledge-to-Act" displays a circular flow diagram. The diagram starts with "Identify Problem" (Determine ITR, Know/Do gap, Identify, Review, Select Knowledge), moves to "Adapt Knowledge to Clinical Context", then "Address Barriers/Facilitators to Knowledge Use", "Select, Tailor, Implement Interventions", "Monitor Knowledge Use", "Evaluate Outcomes", and finally "Sustain Knowledge Use". The center of the diagram is a funnel labeled "Knowledge Inquiry" and "Knowledge Synthesis" leading to "Knowledge Tools/Products". A small video inset of a woman is visible in the top right corner of the slide.

This week, we are following up on the written review article review from last week which discussed the study "Development and Results of an Implementation Plan for High-Intensity Gait Training" by providing a video from the study author Jenni Moore.

Jenni and her team won the Stroke SIG Best Platform Presentation award at CSM 2022. Check out the video link above to watch as she presents the highlights from this presentation and encourages all to incorporate her findings into their physical therapy practice.
